Mr. Breckinridge Declines Being Minister to Spain.

APPOINTMENT OF SENATOR DODGE.

COLT'S PATENT EXTENSION

ANOTHER PECULIAR DEBATE.

THE ENACTING CLAUSE STRICKEN OUT.

How the Appointment of Senator Dodge is Received.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Feb. 9.

The appointment of AUGUSTUS CÆSAR DODGE, Senator from Iowa, as Minister to Spain, is received with universal astonishment, not to say disgust. It is suggested that in this selection the Administration commenced with King Stork of the Fens, and has ended with King Long. The Democratic Senators freely condemn it, although many of them had been, a few days ago, invigorated into singing a recommendation of Mr. DODGE to some office. But nobody dreamed he aspired to a minister. S.

THIRTY-THIRD CONGRESS.—Second Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Friday, Feb. 9.

This being private bill day, on motion of Mr. WADE, it was agreed that such bills only as should obtain no objection should be taken up before 2 o'clock.

The following Senate bills were then passed: Nos. [illegible] and House bills [illegible] 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79,

[illegible] Debates and Affairs, would respond [illegible] to the spirit of the Federal pact nor to the [illegible] Germany as a European Power; that it would enter, even the limits which Article 57 of the final act of Vienna defined as to its external organization, and that on that account the support Germany which he represented could not vote for the adhesion. Faithful to this view the Plenipotentiary of Mecklenburg abstained from voting at a later period, when the Diet was called upon to pronounce itself upon the additional article of the 17th of November.

It is to be regretted, M. le Baron, that the very correct language of M. D'Oubril did not prevail in the Federal Assembly. His object was to spare Germany the complications which the Cabinet of Vienna is laboring more and more to make it responsible for. You are aware that our august master has always carefully avoided any interference (ingérence) in the questions submitted to the deliberations of the Diet, and which are exclusively under its cognizance.

But His Imperial Majesty cannot deny himself the pleasure of expressing to the two Grand-Ducal Courts how much he appreciates their noble attitude in presence of a policy which, under the pretext of assuring the return of peace, tends to make the present war a struggle which will embrace the whole of Europe.

Be so kind as to convey to their Royal Highnesses the expressions of interest of our august master in the best suitable manner you may deem it advisable. I am, &c., NESSELRODE.

"The Four Points."

In the present state of the negotiations, it may not be uninteresting to our readers to place in parallel position the interpretations of the so-called "Four Points," as understood by the Western Powers and Russia respectively. They are as follows:

WESTERN INTERPRETATION, AS CONTAINED IN THE PROTOCOL OF AUG. 8, 1854.	RUSSIAN INTERPRETATION AS EXPRESSED IN THE NOTE OF NOV. 5, 1854.
The Western Powers will demand
1. That the Protectorate hitherto exercised by Russia over the Principalities shall be replaced under the collective guarantee of the Powers by means of a special treaty with the Sublime Porte.	1. The protectorate of the Principalities on the Danube shall be conceded in future also to be exercised in future by Russia, Wallachia, and by the Five Powers collectively.
2. If the navigation of the Danube cannot be freed from all obstacles at its mouth, it shall be at least the principles set forth in the act of the Congress of Vienna shall be fully acted upon and applied in this case.	2. Freedom of the navigation of the Danube, already existing de jure, the restriction of which was never in the contemplated by Russia.
3. If the treaty of July 13, 1841, cannot be annulled, Russia will not with the motive of all the object to the abolition of the contracting parties, for the treaty, if Turkey, as the power most immediately interested, considers the balance of power in needs to the alteration.	3. Revision of the treaty of July 13, 1841, which Russia will not with the motive of all the object to the abolition of the contracting parties, for the treaty, if Turkey, as the power most immediately interested, considers the balance of power in needs to the alteration.
4. If Russia gives up her claim of exercising an official protectorate over the Christian population of the Porte, to the Ottoman Empire, without religion they may not any distinction of religious, [illegible] shall be given, to be given by the Five Powers, Austria, Great Britain, France, and Russia, shall do not mutually agree to take the initiative to obtain from the Sultan the confirmation and the observance of the liberty of the Christian Churches in the dominions of Turkey, and in the common interest of the co-religionists to profit by the liberal intentions of the Sublime Porte, manifested to the Powers by the Hatti-Sherif of Gulhane, but without impairing the dignity and independence of his throne.	4. Joint guarantees for the civil and religious liberty of all the Christian population of the Ottoman Empire, without distinction of creed, to be given by the Five Powers collectively.

The Russian Interpretation of the Four Points.

The Augsberg Gazette of the 22d of January publishes the following as the basis of the interpretation of the four guarantees as drawn up by Prince GORTSCHAKOFF, sent by him before the Conference of the 7th of January, to St. Petersburg, and the acceptance of which by the Emperor NICHOLAS was immediately telegraphed to Vienna. On this basis the Conference of the 8th of January was held, at which a closer agreement (enger Verständigung) between the envoys was attempted. This is the draft of Prince GORTSCHAKOFF, which had previously received the preliminary approval of the Austrian and Prussian Cabinets.

It is as follows:

1. Abolition of the exclusive Protectorate of Russia in Moldavia and Wallachia, the privileges of these provinces recognized by the Sultan, being placed under the guarantees of the Five Powers.

2. Free navigation of the Danube, according to the principles established by the Acts of the Congress of Vienna, in the article on Fluvial Communications. Control of a mixed commission, which would be invested with the necessary powers to destroy the obstacles existing at its mouths, or which might at a later period be formed there.

3. Revision of the treaty of July 13, 1841, to attack more completely the existence of the Ottoman Empire to the balance of Europe. I do not refuse to come to an understanding, in formal conference for peace, on the means which the three Courts may propose to put an end to what they call the preponderance of Russia in the Black Sea, on condition that, in the choice of these means, there be not one of a nature to infringe upon the rights of sovereignty of my august Master in his own territory (chez lui.)

4. A collective guarantee of the Five Powers (substituted for the exclusive patronage possessed hitherto by some of them) for the consideration and observance of the religious privileges of the different Christian communities without distinction of form of worship, on condition that the realization of the solemn promises made in the face of the world by the great Christian Powers shall be a serious and conscientious work, and that the protection promised shall be efficacious and not a vain word.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Meeting of Parliament—Break-up of the Ministry—Resignation of Lord John Russell!!—Official Statement of the Progress of Negotiations.

Both Houses of Parliament reassembled on Tuesday evening, the 23d, after the adjournment.

In the House of Lords the sitting was occupied with a discussion on the subject of issuing medals to the army in the Crimea. The points at issue were, whether rewards should be issued to the whole army, or only to those who have distinguished themselves under fire.

In the House of Commons, Mr. LAYARD questioned the President of the Council "whether he had any objection to lay on the table of the House the correspondence that had taken place with foreign powers with respect to the treaty of 3d of December, 1854, and especially any document concerning the interpretation put by the British and French Governments on the four points, not for negotiation, but for acceptance?"

Lord J. RUSSELL could not say whether or not the correspondence could be laid on the table. He would, however, state generally what had occurred with respect to the four points. In this state the question stood at present, namely: At the end of November the British Government, through their Minister at Vienna, declared their acceptance of the four points. On [illegible] a treaty was signed by France, Austria and Turkey, and on the 28th of December [illegible] by the Ministers of France, Eng[illegible] Austria at Vienna, with Prince GORTSCHAKOFF, the Minister of Russia. At the meeting [illegible] part of the Government of England [illegible] the four points, had which should [illegible] the Russian Government. I will [illegible] (Lord Lord JOHN RUSSELL) that with [illegible] the four points, it was proposed in the [illegible] Prince GORTSCHAKOFF [illegible] the proceedings [illegible] Government under fire.

feel regret at the loss of so great, so eminent, and so influential a member of the Government and of this House, but they are entitled also to say that when he resorted to them in a manner in which, according to usual practice, they were not justified in expecting it. [Hear.] With regard, therefore, to the circumstances under which my noble friend has quitted office, I feel bound to state that I think the hasty and precipitate manner in which he tendered his resignation was a departure from the ordinary practice, and was a measure, I can hardly say of which the Government had a right to complain, but which, at least, they were not justified in expecting. Having stated thus much on this part of the subject, I shall abstain from any further remarks with regard to it. I can assure my noble friend that in making this criticism upon the course he has pursued, I do it from a strong sense of duty, and not from any unfriendly feeling towards him. [Hear, from Lord J. Russell.] I entirely agree with the opinion expressed by the noble Lord towards the close of his address, that, whoever may be charged with the management of the war in future will feel it his duty, so far as his functions go, to conduct the war with vigor and energy, with a view to a successful result. Undoubtedly I concur in that view, and Her Majesty's Government have felt it their duty, notwithstanding the loss which they have sustained by the secession of the noble Lord, not to run away from the motion which is to come on this evening. They have felt that it would have been a disgraceful flight if they had not determined to meet that motion. We stand as we are minus the loss of the noble Lord, [laughter,] and without any other change. We are ready to meet the motion as we stand, and if it should be carried, as of course may come, it is unnecessary for me to say what the result will be. [Hear, and a laugh.] If, in the course of the debate, reasons should be urged against the motion, of sufficient weight to induce the House to reject it, why then it will be for Her Majesty's Government to consider what course they will pursue with regard to their composition and their future. [A laugh.] This, however, we say, that whoever may be the person charged with the conduct of this war, it must be conducted in the manner described by the noble lord—in accordance with the public feeling of the country, and with all the energy and vigor of which the Government is capable. [Hear, hear.] If it be so conducted, I express with my noble friend that this war cannot fail of being brought to a successful issue. We have for us, not only the unanimous and enthusiastic feeling of the British nation, but we have also the cordial assistance and cooperation of our great ally, the Emperor of the French, and the French nation. [Hear.] I must say that one of the most magnificent spectacles which history has ever presented to mankind is to see these two great nations uniting their efforts in so noble and glorious a cause. We have often seen in former times two great Powers united and cooperating for the purposes of injustice, in the pursuit of further conquest, and for the destruction of the independence of nations; but this is the first time in the history of mankind in which we have seen two great nations, cooperating cordially and earnestly as one Power in support of a cause honorable to both. [Hear, hear.] It must be evident, therefore, that if the energies of this country are directed, in cooperation with those of the French nation, by a Government which knows the value of the instruments it possesses, and which appreciates the objects it has in view, my noble friend will prove a true prophet, and the war will be conducted to an honorable and safe peace—a peace which will secure not only the dignity of the country, but the independence and future tranquillity of Europe. [Cheers.]

Mr. Roebuck then proceeded with his motion for "a select committee to inquire into the condition of our army before Sebastopol, and into the conduct of those departments of the Government whose duty it has been to minister to the wants of that army." He complained that Lord John Russell would not support his motion, though he had admitted its necessity. But though deserted by the noble lord, he would not abandon his motion. The question divided itself into two parts—the condition of the army, and who had brought it into that condition. Now, the destitute condition of the army was admitted by the noble lord, as well as the fact that that destitute condition was owing to the incapacity that still continued to govern. We had sent from this country 54,000 men, splendidly equipped. It appeared there were scarcely now more than 14,000 bayonets, and of these less than 6,000 men were in health. He believed that this state of things had been brought about by incapacity at home and incapacity abroad. The country had sent stores sufficient for an army twice the number, but they could not be transported from Balaklava to the camp.

Here the honorable and learned gentleman, who addressed the House under symptoms of great physical debility, which induced several members to request him to speak sitting, but which he declined, was so fast edged to chose abruptly, amid the sympathizing cheers of the House, by moving his committee.

After a long pause, and amidst cries of "Divide!" and "Agree!"

Mr. Sidney Herbert rose, and expressed his great regret for the physical weakness of the honorable and learned gentleman. He admitted that exposure, fatigue, inclement weather, and war, had reduced the Crimean army considerably. This showed that there had been great mismanagement somewhere. He believed the first cause of that disorganization was the system that had been pursued for the last forty years. Strictly speaking, we had no army during Sir Robert Peel's time. He did not speak of the reductions that had been made; but he maintained that the army had been constituted for police rather than for war. Hence the discipline was regimental, not divisional. There were field officers now in the Crimea who never before saw a brigade. Another reason was that the soldiers, though individually brave, were not accustomed in this country to have everything done for them, and hence, on a campaign, they were comparatively helpless. It certainly from these facts that the mortality had been great—as high, he believed, as fourteen per cent. This was not equal to the mortality in the Duke of Wellington's army on the retreat from Burgos, and in other cases; but it was confessedly deplorable. The calamity was not equally spread, however, over all the divisions of the army, those nearer Balaklava being better off than others. It was true, as the honorable and learned gentleman said, that stores had been sent to Balaklava sufficient for twice the number of troops there. It would be asked, then, why had they not been carried to the camp? The Government did not shrink from the responsibility of what had been done there; but the House must be aware that at such a distance it was difficult to find out the proper men and to exercise sufficient control. They had, however, given Lord Raglan full power to dismiss every man of proved insufficiency, and to substitute capable men in their place. After conducting various enlargements which had been circulated, such as sending out huts without nails, he said it was his intention to lay full remedy of all that had been done on the table of the house. He then went into minute details of what the Duke of Newcastle had done in organizing a depot train, a staff corps, and other arrangements for the army. With regard to the constitution of offices, he did not think that they could be efficiently brought under one head, but proposed that they should be kept under different heads, but all under the control of one head; and that was about to be done. He deprecated the appointment of a Committee, which must paralyze the conduct of any Government as well as of the army in the field, and he earnestly trusted the House would come to the same decision.

The Press and the Peers—Lord Winchilsea's Attack on the Times.

From the London Times, Jan. 27.

Few occasions have passed of late years without an elaborate attack being made by some member of Parliament upon the policy and conduct of this journal; and last night Lord Winchilsea opened against us with a vigor that, but for the noise of buildings and the traffic between Westminster and Blackfriars, would certainly have given us the pleasure of hearing his remarks without leaving the spot where we write. The whole of his statement arises in his brother peers on the course adopted by the Times since the war in the Crimea took an unfavorable turn may, however, be summed up in a single phrase—Lord Winchilsea is not of our opinion. We are we understand, as to differ with him upon the propriety of laying before the country at once and unvarnished account of the condition of our forces. Lord Winchilsea is all for keeping the country in the dark. Upon this point we join issue with him; but we would preface the few remarks we shall offer in reply to Lord Winchilsea's attack upon us by assuring him that from us he has no "suspicion" to fear. We do not "suspect" any Englishman to be poor or to be present—who fearlessly and conscientiously endeavors to discharge his duty to his country. We may deny his facts if they be founded on imperfect information, we may ridicule his opinions if they be ill-considered, we may question the wisdom of his counsels, and more especially we may shake our heads and express our fears that his advice, if adopted, would lead to serious disasters; but we shall do so with the dignity of a man who, knowing his integrity, knows that he has published nothing that he does not believe to be the truth, and who, knowing his independence

Congressional.

Yesterday was private bill day in the Senate, and a very large number of private bills were passed.

The House took up and passed the bill to remodel the Diplomatic and Consular System of the United States. During the debate, and just previous to the vote, Mr. BRECKINRIDGE stated that he had declined the appointment of Minister to Spain. There was another talk over the COLT Patent Extension bill, the enacting clause of which was stricken out.

The Foreign News.

The steamer Atlantic, at this port, brings a budget of political news of extraordinary interest. The resignation of Lord JOHN RUSSELL has brought about a Ministerial crisis in England. His speech in the Commons in explanation of his course, while it seems to have reflected little credit upon his own statesmanship or consistency, has opened the eyes of the public of England to the real difficulties which have surrounded and constantly embarrassed the War since the commencement of the unfortunate campaign in the Crimea. It will seriously test the popularity of the ABERDEEN Ministry, if, indeed, it should not lead to its early and disgraceful overthrow. The veteran diplomatist, PALMERSTON, it will be seen, adheres to its sinking fortunes; in the hope, it is said, of placing himself in position to be called by the Queen to constitute a new Government, in the probable event of Lord ABERDEEN's resignation. The London press is almost uniformly severe upon the retiring President of the Council. The Ministerial Chronicle is reproachful, the Times sarcastic, and the Morning Herald (Derbyite) abusive. With the latter, the First Lord of the Treasury comes in for a liberal share of scathing criticism, while Lord DERBY is pointed to as the man of popularity and skill to succeed him.

The Prince and the Peers are at formal issue. The London Times has been arraigned by Lord WINCHILSEA for its course to the Army and its Commander in the Crimea, and it is almost needless to say that the reply from the fifth estate of the realm has all the advantages of ability and popular sympathy. The Duke of NEWCASTLE, in answer to a question from Lord WINCHILSEA, stated that the Times correspondent in the Crimea was not suffered to go out free in a Government transport, nor is he living in the Crimea at the cost of the Government. He had remonstrated with the entire London press on the imprudence of their exposure of the movements of the Army before Sebastopol, through their correspondents, to Russian observation.

In the House of Lords, Lord LYNDHURST has moved a resolution of inquiry on the conduct of the War, looking to the impeachment of the Ministry.

The Vienna Conferences have been postponed to the middle of February. Meanwhile a number of diplomatic notes between Austria, Prussia and France have been published, one of which, from the French Minister of Foreign Relations in reply to Prussia, will attract attention.

Our special Russian Correspondent in the following letter affords other items of general interest, as well as a commentary on the political events just referred to, which we commend to the attention of the reader. The latest news, we may add, from the Crimea, by telegraph, is to the effect that to the 16th January, nothing of importance had occurred before Sebastopol. The frost was very severe, and prejudicial to both the Allies and the Russians. The siege works had been advanced to within 45 metres of the fortifications.

LONDON, Friday, January 26.

You will not have to complain of the uninteresting nature of the news by this mail. You will find diplomatic correspondences of decisive character, unprecedented in importance by manifestations of warlike spirit, in a new direction, to be eclipsed for the time, by the resignation of Lord JOHN RUSSELL. I give you, for the present, no speculations, and spare you all the deductions that I might draw from this last important fact, and I tell you only broadly, that peace looks more than ever, beneath all these intrigues, evolutions and crises. After this simple statement of my increased conviction I merely recapitulate the news and rumors. Lord JOHN RUSSELL tendered his resignation last Wednesday morning. People say he wished to demonstrate his dissent from all that has not been done regarding the army organization. Such may be one reason, but not the principal one. Lord JOHN resigned—so I am credibly informed—because directly after he had been made the Government organ in the House of Commons, to declare that no peace had been sought to treat for, when peace envoys were dispatched. This is one reason, whether it will or will not be considered I know not. It was a trick to cheat Parliament and the public—Lord JOHN having been made the unwilling vehicle of the falsehood—which he saw the falling Minister may stretch out a helping hand to one who remained faithful to him in the hour of desertion. The fall of the whole Cabinet, Lord JOHN included, would have been followed, without doubt, by a DERBY-DISRAELI combination, but in case of a fall occasioned by mutiny in the Cabinet itself, the noble Viscount may form a reasonable hope of the strongest because the greatest support to his being called upon to carry on the Queen's Government. Such is PALMERSTON's calculation, at least it was explained to me by a gentleman of official connections. Who is to gain? We will see. For the present I dare wager on PALMERSTON, provided ABERDEEN should resign, which is by no means sure, whatever the Times may say. You will probably hear something definite from Liverpool, as the latest news by telegraph. [We have the London papers of Saturday.—ED.] I cannot give you anything of the kind, because the explanations, and it may be, revelations, will take place this evening, after this letter will have been posted. There is considerable excitement in all circles, in consequence of this resignation, but the public is as yet undecided whom to crucify. The manner in which his lordship shrank from facing a public debate upon measures to which he was a party, is much blamed; but, on the other side, his pronunciamento is looked upon as a fact likely to lead to a vigorous policy of war. I must tell you that I do not share this opinion, much as the fall of ABERDEEN would delight me. Whoever looks with an impartial eye on the situation of affairs, will fully endorse the very manly exposition by Mr. BRIGHT, at the last Manchester soirée, of Lords J. RUSSELL's and PALMERSTON's characters. I recommend that speech to your attention. As far as internal reforms go—surely a great field—England may gain by having a PALMERSTON rather than an ABERDEEN, or a RUSSELL rather than a PALMERSTON, but as to a Foreign policy in emergencies involving popular interests at large, they are all alike—the only thing they differ in being in the more or less cleverness to represent their reactionary transactions under a light of seeming liberalism.

The success of the French loan—respecting which I have received and expect to receive some more interesting details to be sent to you by next mail—seems to have emboldened NAPOLEON III. I am written to from Paris that a campaign on the Rhine is looked for with all but certainty. The Emperor, it is said, is sensibly changed in his views by the prospect of a battle-field on which, it being nearer home, he could take the command in person. The not only warlike, but impertinent, note of M. DROUYN DE L'HUYS to Prussia's pretentions for a share in the Vienna consultations, and the epigrammatic rectifications respecting the same State, in the Moniteur, are surely signs of a spirit raised by a pocket full of millions. However, you must not over-rate the importance of these manifestations. NAPOLEON's ambition seems to be to gain credit for a European coalition as a mere demonstration of his influence against Russia, whose defeat would surely not be considered as humiliating if effected by a combination of all Powers. But Prussia is not willing to serve as a means of Napoleonic demonstration, and so December 2d gets angry. That is all. The venerable Diet of Frankfort is now expected to settle the matter in accordance to Austria's wishes, who grows warlike in proportion to the chances of peace becoming more evident. The Congress of Vienna must look on Europe in arms. You will see from the diplomatic papers, published since the last mail, how completely they all agree on the basis of reconciliation, and how right I was in telling you so ever since the treaty of December has been concluded. If you look at affairs as they appear on the surface, they are to be sure of an extremely bellicose character; but examine their depths and you will everywhere discover the indications of a peaceful disposition. I may be wrong in my views, but I adhere to them until better convinced. The Princes are coming home. Negotiations will commence on the 21 of February. Winter is raging in the Crimea, which becomes the heaviest for reinforcements constantly sent and always dying away. The Times will not hear of a second army, and gives up the first as already lost; while its pages do not blush under the sensational office to place the remainder of what has been sent under the command of General CANROBERT! Such are the signs. Great as the disasters surely are in the Allied army, the description given by the Times is evidently exaggerated in order to serve a purpose, which I leave you to guess.

KOSSUTH's two last articles—of which I sent you one by last mail—have produced a great sensation. No daily paper acted thus at all. Do you know why? Because they concerted, not to mention what they considered to be an intrusion. This is one of the consequences of the alliance with despots. England, so boastful of her liberalism—English editors, so haughty to parade their independence and love of Freedom, are, by having become the good friends of NAPOLEON and FRANCIS JOSEPH, obliged to shun the company of honest men, of patriots whom they admired, extolled, but lately. They dare not address them; and if asked from Paris or Vienna what KOSSUTH is doing, they would answer: "We do not know the man." And so to palliate these shameful desertions of all principle, they speak of intrusion, and will take no notice of the intruder. But, as I said, the articles of KOSSUTH are, nevertheless, of very great importance, and the rush for the Sunday Times is unexampled. In reading rooms you never can get the paper. It goes from hand to hand, engaged for hours in advance. The sale of the paper has risen, and is rising by thousands at each fresh article, and my newsman says he sends just double the number of copies he previously did, to country subscribers. There will be no article of KOSSUTH's in next Sunday's number.

From the seat of war there is nothing important, but I must tell you that the fate of the Crimean expedition is likely to end at the very point where it has landed—I mean Eupatoria. There is a storm gathering in that direction for one or the other party. That the Russians would not have suffered this gathering if not conscious of their capability to disperse it by a terrible blow, seems more than probable. Why not have taken, indeed, Eupatoria, while it was defended but by some 1,500 men? The answer to this question may come day come in the announcement by telegraph that there is no Turkish army left in the Crimea.

BARTHELEMY has been executed. You will see from the papers how he behaved. The affair is still involved in mystery, but it will come out by and by. It has—I was positively assured—a political side.

We had cold, rain, snow, dark and dreary days during these last ten days; and, judging from what people, in such a time, suffer here in London, one is indeed shuddering at the idea of the miseries which those poor fellows in the Crimea must contend against and succumb under.

An Up-Town City Hall.

We have been surprised to learn how strong a disposition there is, on the part of some whose dispositions are very apt to assume the shape of laws, to build the new City Hall up town—as far up as the neighborhood of Madison-square. If the question were taken to-day in the Board of Aldermen, very likely we should find the majority of them voting for the project; and, without knowing definitely the fact, we are led to suspect that our excellent Mayor very likely would approve it. Of course, the project would not include the policy of taking the Courts up there. They would still remain in the Park; but the Mayor's Office, the two Boards, and some few of the Departments only, would be removed.

Those in favor of the thing say that Madison-square is far more central than the Park. Geographically it is so at present. But who believes that half a score of years will elapse without seeing the "Consolidated City of Brooklyn" again consolidated with New-York, and ultimately the other adjacent towns and cities, whose interests are coincident with those of the parent City, united with it under a common Charter. And when that time comes, we shall need that the offices for the transaction of the municipal affairs of the consolidated metropolis be located in a spot which is not only easily accessible to every portion of Manhattan Island, but central, also, to the whole cluster of municipalities.

It is not strange that the owners of up-town property, when they consult their personal interest, should favor the project, but we wonder that the residents of the palaces in that neighborhood consent. For if the City Hall goes into those exclusive quarters, the Upper Ten must go out. Their magnificent suites of apartments will soon be converted into Lawyers' Commons. Their palaces will be turned into boarding-houses. The thundering of steam-presses will disturb the rest of the stately dames and their delicate daughters. Printers with Africanized hands and faces will take no pains not to smouch their tinted ceilings. We shall drabble ink on their white marble mantels, and proof-readers will hold copy and correct in their conservatories. Newsboys will sleep in their halls. Telegraph messengers will go dodging into their private rooms. Banks and shoe-shops, cake and coffee saloons, old clothes stores, insurance offices, public school-rooms, and patent medicine factories will ensconce themselves in their roomy mansions. However, if the Upper Ten are willing to be driven up to Yorkville, down to the lumber yards on the North River, or over to "Germany" on the East, far be it from us to complain that trade and business and stirring life replace the solemn dullness that broods over their quarters. Only this we may add: The Park is most central of any part of the City for its Hall at present; and by the time that the City's growth has dragged that centre much farther up, the across-the-ferry cities will be thundering for a union, and which would have the effect at once to drag the centre back again—to the Park, or even nearer to the Battery.

Musical.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—The continued indisposition of Miss LOUISA PYNE—prolonged, we believe, by the remarkable severity of the weather—has compelled the closing of this popular establishment during the week. We learn, however, that the convalescence of the young lady is so far recovered as to render it almost certain that she will make her appearance on Monday next.

This unexpected event, which has disappointed so many of this admirable society, should be more to be regretted from the fact that but another week remains of the present engagement. "Cinderella" will be repeated three times each week—the remaining three being devoted to other popular operas. Miss LOUISA PYNE, Mr. HARRISON, and the other members of the troupe, will then present at Philadelphia.

CESSATION OF THE SNOW STORM.

The snow actually ceased falling last evening. After a continual creeping of snowy flakes since Wednesday, the sky became comparatively clear late in the day; and also everybody had succeeded in getting a tremendous influenza, the temperature moderated, the snow packed down into good sleighing order, travel was fairly resumed, and we look now for a happier season. During the day and night, the sleighing was taken advantage of in the City. The sound of bell-horses, blown lustily by the reveleers in big sleighs, and behind first horses, filled the ears of listening people, who were forced to listen because they could not help it. Shouts, scraps of negro songs, women (of doubtful position) driving, six-in-hand teams by way of having sport, screams, yells, bawls,—now and then a neat one-horse little institution, containing only "me and Polly"—an occasional upset—a general hubbub and a continual rest and rattle, mingled with oaths and jests and free-and-easy interchanges of passing courtesies,—these are the customary attendants of New-York sleigh-riding. They are to be observed in all their perfection.

Travel on the City Railroads is regularly resumed. Few or none of the Companies have placed sleighs on their routes, preferring to keep the tracks clear by the force of double teams and snow-plows. On the large roads, centering in the City and suburbs, the delays have finally been conquered. The night express train on the New-York and Erie Railroad, due at Jersey City at 9:41 o'clock yesterday morning, arrived at 4½ o'clock P. M. The two trains due last evening arrived within two hours of the time due. The track is now quite clear, and the trains departed regularly yesterday afternoon. On the New-Jersey Railroad the trains arrived and departed regularly, and nearly on time in every instance.

The trains on the Hudson River Road arrived last evening within half an hour of their regular time.

Reports by Telegraph.

BOSTON, Feb. 9—A. M.—A snow storm commenced during the night and still falls thick; at present it is on the ground to a depth of about fourteen inches. It is drifting considerably, but so far has not seriously interfered with Railroad travel.

MONTREAL, Feb. 8.—Weather has greatly changed. Thermometer which has ranged for the last three days at more than 20° below zero, now marks 22° above. Snow-ing slightly.

Business dull. Money market depressed.

PICTOU, Feb. 9, A. M.—A heavy snow storm is prevailing here, and a strong northeast gale is blowing. At Eastport, Calais and Bangor the weather is very cold, but there is no snow.

HAMILTON, Feb. 8.—It has been snowing slightly here to-day with an easterly wind. The thermometer stands at 20° above zero.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—Weather moderate; cloudy, with indications of more snow. The morning train from New-York arrived here at 7½ P. M.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 9.—Weather sleet and cold.

PORTLAND, Feb. 9—A. M.—A snow storm has set in here.

The Pacific Trains.

From the St. Louis Intelligencer, Feb. 3.

We conversed this morning with a gentleman, a citizen of St. Louis, who came down last night from Springfield, and who gave us some information of the condition of affairs on the railroads. Our informant left Bloomington last Sunday, and by dint of severe labor, in which all the passengers toiled heartily and laboriously, the train succeeded in making its way through. At one drift the snow was so deep that the engineer, the crew, and the train had to next its way through, completely hid from view, and enveloped in the black abroad. To aid the engine, the passengers turned out, and having a kind of shovel prepared for an emergency, worked for several hours in throwing the snow off the track. The intensity of the cold may be imagined, when it is stated that the thermometer indicated 20° below zero. Twenty-seven miles beyond Bloomington, a train of cars was frozen up in a drift, not able either to proceed or retreat, in consequence of a lack of fuel. The cars were filled with passengers, many of whom were women and children, and their sufferings may be conceived when we state that they had torn three cars to pieces for fuel. While our informant was at Bloomington, an effort was made to reach the sufferers. Sleighs were started off to the spot, but after a day of weary labor, in which the horses were broken down and exhausted, they returned to Bloomington, having gone only twelve miles. The great depth of the snow, the difficulty of getting through the large drifts lying at frequent intervals along the prairies, the terrific force of the wind, which filled the air with whirling snow, and the almost insufferable severity of the cold—made the attempt to reach the cars with sleighs a hopeless and futile task. So much for the suffering on the Chicago and Mississippi Road. On the Illinois Central affairs are worse still. A train is frozen up near Decatur, and the wretched passengers suffer, not only for lack of fuel but for want of food, and shocking to relate, were compelled by the bitter necessities of their condition to eat dogs to keep from starving. This fact is reliably stated in the Bloomington and Springfield papers, and it is further confirmed, says our informant, by the testimony of individuals in Bloomington. Indeed, it was a subject of conversation in that city. A Mr. MORGAN, nephew of the Superintendent of the Chicago and Mississippi Road, had both his legs frozen, and it is feared that many others have suffered similar calamities. A like condition of things prevails on the Rock Island Railroad, though no detailed accounts from there have reached us. Governor MATTESON had first dispatched us to Bloomington to have the road cleared, that the train might come through, but very shortly it was supposed Yesterday at Springfield that a sufficient number of the absent Legislators would get in to-day to constitute a quorum in both Houses.

We doubt very much if the tracks will be entirely cleared for several days longer yet, unless human efforts are aided by the melting influence of the sun. There are business men of St. Louis anxious to get on to New-York, and others at Chicago who are anxious to return home. A dispatch from Chicago yesterday, gives little reason to hope that the track will be cleared as soon as we expected. The delayed mails will hardly reach here before Sunday or Monday.

The Great Snow-Storm.

From the Rochester (Penn.) Weekly Times, Jan. 28.

We were visited on the night of the 20th and the following day and night, with one of the most severe snow-storms ever known in the West.

On Saturday, the 20th, the wind blew very strong from the northwest, cloudy and extremely cold—and at 10 o'clock on Saturday night it began to snow with great rapidity, and continued to fall for thirty-two hours without intermission.

The sky during the whole time was filled with so dense a mass of falling snow, that it was impossible to see at a distance of a few yards.

The wind continued to blow from the northwest a perfect hurricane. Forest trees were prostrated; old buildings were blown down; good houses, barns and outbuildings were uncovered, fences scattered, plows and every other agricultural implement which the ravages of the wind were not able to find, blown about like so many chaff.

There was great suffering with many that were not prepared for such a storm, in consequence of their inexperience. The unwary drift to lose the grass before them, and the snow was so deep that persons could not leave their cottages.

And now, up to this time, the business of getting the grain we have not seen a team in the streets of Rochester, usually crowded with vehicles. The streets are blocked with snow.

We have never seen anything that looks so much like the dreary scenes of New-England as this. Drifts of snow piled up some six feet and upwards high, and all sorts of rumors have been circulated in regard to the extent of the storm. We have heard that it was universally severe throughout the country, and that the roads would be impassable for weeks. We have also heard that the storm was confined to this section, and that it was not so severe in other directions.

THE ROMAN REPUBLICANS.

Celebration of the Sixth Anniversary of the Tabernacle.

SPEECHES OF SIGNOR FORESTI, REV. J. P. THOMPSON, REV. R. H. INSKIP, SIGMUND KAUFMAN AND OTHERS.

The Sixth Anniversary of the Roman Republic was celebrated last evening at the Tabernacle. About twelve hundred citizens were present, the majority of whom were of foreign birth. The space in the gallery in front of the organ was appropriately decorated by the revolutionary flags of the different nationalities of Europe.

In the centre was the banner of the Roman Republic, on which was a representation of a spread Eagle, and under it the words "Dio e Popolo." On the right were the Stars and Stripes and on the left the Roman tri-color. On one side of this trio of national banners was the flag of Universal Democracy and the Hungarian Revolutionary flag; on the other the Red Republican and Cuban flags. Liberty came surmounted each grouping of banners. The flag of Poland and that of Society "In Montagne" were placed together.

THEODORE DWIGHT, Esq., was called to the chair. He announced the peculiar circumstances under which the Roman Republic was established. The Italians were not called upon to act by a revolution, but by the necessities of the case, as they were without a Government. The man, who pretended to be the Vicegerent of God, had abandoned them, and they were in the same condition as were their forefathers one thousand nine hundred years before; when, for the first time, they had an opportunity to form a government, they did not choose Anarchy, but a Republic, and during the existence of the Republic, they sustained it with honor. Even the assassins mysteriously disappeared with their father the Pope. They opened the bloody Inquisition to the world, for the first time since its institution, and they erected a monument to show their detestation of it. We meet to-night to celebrate the downfall of Papacy as a temporal power, and the Republic that followed it would now have been in existence were it not for French arms. We have met, too, to cast our eyes before us and see whether we may not predict soon the restoration of the Roman Republic. The speaker then referred in eloquent terms to the career of Prof. FORNETI, and other patriots, who had suffered from European tyranny, and believed that it would not be long before they could once again see their native land.

Mr. McMULLEN then read letters from Messrs GEORGE S. HILLIARD, B. SILLIMAN, Sr., and Hon. HORACE GREELEY, received by the Committee from the above gentlemen, who were not in attendance.

Letters from Mayor HALL, of Brooklyn, HUGH MAXWELL, Professor MORSE, and others, were read to the assembly by the Secretary.

The President then made some appropriate remarks in introducing Professor FORESTI, who was received with loud cheers.

Professor FORESTI addressed the audience in Italian.

Rev. JOSEPH P. THOMPSON, pastor of the Tabernacle Church, next addressed the meeting.

The following preamble and resolutions were then offered and adopted:

Whereas, The Pope abandoned Rome on the 24th November, 1848, and whereas the Roman people, in the place of the fugitive Pontifical authority, established a Republic, remarkable for its moderation, but which, nevertheless, has been calumniated and denounced by the Monarchies; be it

Resolved, That the Government of the Roman Republic was in the full of February, 1849, in entitled to the thanks of mankind for the good order and humanity exhibited by it under such peculiarly difficult circumstances.

Resolved, That the Constituent Assembly of the Roman Republic, having been elected by Universal Suffrage, is the only legitimate authority in that State—and that the pretext of government of the Pope, restored by the bayonets of foreign powers, is usurpative.

Resolved, That we will hail with joy the establishment of the Republic in Italy.

The meeting was addressed by a number of gentlemen, and the celebration closed a few minutes after 11 o'clock.

GENERAL NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

Canadian Affairs—Weather, &c.

TORONTO, Thursday, Feb. 8.

The weather here is very dull and cloudy. There was a slight fall of snow to-day. The thermometer stands at 15° above zero.

The steamer Chief Justice was aground on her way here from Niagara. Her passengers were landed safe by means of a rope from the vessel to the shore. Efforts are still making to lighten the ship and get her off.

Messrs. HENRY BULLEN, J. P. LITCHFIELD, M.D. RICHARDS and LOUIS RICHARDS have been appointed Judges from Lower Canada for the selection of products from Upper Canada for the Paris Exhibition.

Nomination of Hon. James Shields by Democrats—The Railroads, &c., &c.

CHICAGO, Ill., Friday, Feb. 9.

Hon. JAMES SHIELDS has been nominated as the Democratic candidate for Congress from the Eighth Congressional District, now vacant by the election of LYMAN TRUMBULL to the United States Senate.

The Chicago and Mississippi Railroad will probably be open to-day. The mails for St. Louis and along the line of the road have accumulated in a sufficient quantity to load up one freight train. They have been detained in Chicago for the past three weeks. Over one hundred pounds of mail matter were on hand for Springfield and St. Louis.

The Illinois Central Railroad will most probably be open to-day also, and then all except the Military Tract and Galena Air Line will be opened under.

BOSTON, Friday, Feb. 9.

General WILSON, the new Senator elect from this State, left here yesterday afternoon for Washington. He was enthusiastically cheered by a large number of his friends who had gathered at the depot to take leave of him.

At Worcester a delegation of Anti-Slavery men greeted him, and a speech was made by W. W. RICE, Esq., to which General WILSON briefly responded, saying he knew the principles which the people of Massachusetts entertained about all others and that he should strive faithfully to exhibit them.

Proceedings of Legislature—Railroads, &c.

ALBANY, Friday, Feb. 9.

The Grand Jury have found bills against twenty-five liquor sellers, and are now yet brought. They have also indicted the managers of prize concerts.

The Maine Law passed the House at half-past six to-day, and is now the law. Great rejoicing at Metropolitan is consequence.

River still closed and business extremely dull.

Know-Nothing Caucus.

HARRISBURG, Friday, Feb. 9.

The Americans are holding a Caucus this evening to agree upon a candidate for Senator in place of CAMERON. The opposition are so numerous that it will probably be late before the Caucus will be able to make its selection.

Marine Disaster.

BOSTON, Friday, Feb. 9.

The bark Maryland, from Palermo for Boston, with a cargo of oranges, lemons, nuts and sumac, went ashore yesterday on Ipswich Beach, and is now full of water. Her crew were saved by life boats.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Rents Down-Town.

The tendency of rents in and about Wall-street is downward, although there are not wanting owners who have demanded a considerable advance for desirable rooms, but such demands have not as yet been acceded to. The natural and inevitable result of the state of things which has existed for the last year or two is that Banking, Insurance and Brokers' business will diffuse itself beyond the inexorable boundaries of Wall-street, which are Trinity Church on the west and the river on the east. The erection of Trinity building on Broadway, out of Wall-street, was the first bold attempt to break down its traditional exclusiveness, and the establishment of BELMONT, in Beaver-street, and of DUNCAN & SHERMAN, in William-street, both near Wall-street, but yet out of the charmed limits, has given encouragement for the conversion of warehouses at various points within a hundred yards of Wall-street into elegant and commodious suites of offices. One hundred and fifty-seven removals, nearly all of them in new and elegant buildings, within two hundred feet of Wall-street, will be ready for occupation within the next two months, and it is impossible that the extravagant rents demanded in the street for the last year or two can be upheld in the face of such competition. In London, the neighborhood and not the street is the consideration with bankers and brokers. In that city the houses of PEABODY and BARINGS, and other leading firms, are not side by side in Lombard-street, but are scattered about at various points, acknowledging the Royal Exchange and Bank of England for a centre. Wall-street must for years be a financial centre, but possessing no advantage which may not be shared by property in the immediate vicinity.—Courier and Enquirer.

The Religious—Unauthorized Interference.

M. MALL, Belgian Consul at this port, has taken umbrage at the interference of his colleague of Philadelphia in the affairs of the Religious in confinement here. M. MALL addresses the following letter to Mayor WOOD:

NEW-YORK, Tuesday evening, Feb. 6.

SIR: I have just seen in the public newspapers two letters, purporting to be written by Mr. MANON, Belgian Consul at Philadelphia, one of them addressed to you, the other to the citizens of the Belgians, now detained in this City.

Without intending to express any opinion upon the proceedings of MANON, I feel nevertheless impelled to declare to you, that they are an unwarranted interference in my own consular jurisdiction, and in consequence I have requested the circumstances to the Belgian Minister of Foreign Affairs at Washington.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

(Signed) HENRY W. T. MALL,
Consul of Belgium.

To Hon. FERDINAND WOOD,
Mayor of the City of New-York.

American and Foreign Benevolent Prudential and Employment Society.

At meetings of this Society, held at their rooms, No. 12 Bible House, Astor-place, on the 29th January and the 5th February, FRANK COPPER, Esq., President of the Society, in the Chair, the following among other business was transacted. The Committee on Transit reported that eighty-five persons have received traveling tickets and been forwarded into the interior. The Committee to whom was referred the subject of the best plan for forwarding to the interior emigrants and other unemployed persons, reported and the report after being amended was adopted. The Committee on Finance reported that since the last monthly meeting of the Board $1,199 had been received into the treasury.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Board be tendered to the Committee of Distribution of the proceeds of the recent concert generously given by Gazzi and Maretzek for the benefit of the poor of this City, for their liberal donation of $200 to the funds of this Society.

Resolved, That the Committee on Transit be authorized and instructed to provide for the relief of deserving emigrants and others to procure in the country soliciting labourers.

Resolved, That a Committee of three be appointed to examine the various bills now before Congress relating to emigration, and to prepare a memorial to Congress, to be presented at the Board next meeting.

Congressional Business.

Councilman BARON (Fifth District) took his seat last evening. BERNARD GAFFNEY was admitted to the seat of the Fifteenth District.

A proposal to purchase the Eighth Avenue Railroad at an advance of one per cent upon the original cost, was referred to the Finance Committee.

Gymnastic Exhibition.

The last of the Seventh Semi-Annual Exhibitions, at OTTINGER'S Gymnasium in Crosby-street, took place last evening. There was a very large attendance of ladies and gentlemen. The exhibition of the numerous gymnasts was truly surprising, and elicited great applause.

Fire in Harvey-street.

The frame dwelling house of Messrs. WARNER & LOVE, No. 19 Harvey-street, and No. 26 Park-place, had a narrow escape from destruction by fire at 9½ o'clock, yesterday morning. From a defect in a flue, it is thought, a fire broke out in the basement of the building, but was almost instantly discovered by PETER SAUNDERS, a member of the Resistance Watch, while patrolling his beat. Mr. SAUNDERS gave instant alarm, the flames were soon on hand and extinguished the flames before they had made much progress, or caused any serious damage.

Fire in Fulton-street.

The frame store of E. F. GAYNOR, No. 94 Fulton-street, was on fire at about 11 o'clock last night. The fire was confined to the store. Its origin has not been ascertained. The damage to building and stock amounted to about $1,000.

The Neglected Poor.

We have heard of a respectable widow—having several children—making known her distress in a quarter where she hoped her appeal would not be in vain. She was responded to by asking her how she happened to live in so good a house. She answered that she had always lived in a respectable house. She wants food and her children want clothing. Any inquiry by "Widow," at this office, will be satisfied.

Anti-Slavery Lecture.

Hon. NATHANIEL P. BANKS being unable to fulfil his engagement to speak on Slavery at the Tabernacle on Tuesday evening next, the place will be supplied by Rev. SAMUEL J. MAY, of Syracuse.

☞ Mr. WILLIAM W. FIRMIN, who was admitted to the Asylum of the Tompkins Ward, in 1849, has been sent to Blackwell's Island, as his friends, as a vagrant. How this inference has come upon him, he does not state.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

MORE ABOUT LOCKS.—AN ARTICLE CALCULATED to protect the public against the sale of the World's Fair and well IONED ROTATING PERMUTATION PLATE LOCK, (more commonly called "The World's Fair Lock,") having recently been published, the subscribers would refer all who may be deceived by the following notice:

SOUTH AMERICA.

THE ISTHMUS.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PANAMA, Sunday, Jan. 14, 1855.

Having just returned from a thorough examination of the route of the Panama Railroad, its construction and workings, &c., &c., I find that the Road so far as finished is built of the very best material, and in the most substantial manner. The masonry work of the culverts and bridges across the innumerable streams that cross the line of the Road is built of hewn stone of the best quality.

The enterprising Company to whom this Road belongs has had every difficulty and disadvantage to contend against; the unhealthiness of the climate, the difficulty of procuring laborers, and of procuring materials for the construction of the road, are among a few of the difficulties they have had to contend against. The timber used for the purposes of the road had to be transported, every foot of it, from the United States and Carthagena; all the houses built for the use of the Company, which comprise a large number—the laborers having large and commodious frame boarding-houses built at stated intervals upon the line of the road—were all transported from the United States. The ties or sleepers for the road were brought from Carthagena, and are of wood called lignum vitæ, and cost, by the time they were laid down ready for the rails, $2 50 each. There is not a foot of timber on the whole line of the road that could be made available for constructing the road. All the provisions for the use of the laborers and attaches of the Company are also brought from the United States.

The first seven miles of the road, after leaving Aspinwall, run through an almost impenetrable swamp, the water being from one to three feet deep the whole distance. The soil at the bottom is composed of blue mud, soft and miry. Spiles were driven down the whole distance, and a frame-work built upon the same to the height of twelve feet, which was sunk down to a level of the road, and then ballasted or filled up with stone and gravel, which makes the road very substantial and solid. The road then takes its course along the bank of the Chagres River, and crosses that stream at Barbacoa by a fine and substantial bridge, which will compare favorably with any work of a similar nature in the United States.

The Panama Railroad Company deserve great credit for carrying on successfully this truly great work. The vast and immense benefit which the commercial interests of the United States will secure through this channel can scarcely be conceived. The trade of the United States with the states of the Pacific coast—Australia, China and Japan—will be brought several months nearer. Indeed, at one bound you cross from the Atlantic to the Pacific; thence you can go by steam to every port of importance on the Pacific, from the Southern extremity of Chili to the Russian Possessions in the North. Should Mr. SEWARD's Steam Navigation bill pass the present Congress, which it is earnestly hoped it will, the distance from New-York to San Francisco, China and Japan, will be greatly reduced, and goods can be transported to these places, through the Panama Railroad, at a much cheaper rate, and at a cost of much less time, than by clippers around the horn. A. J. P.

The Aspinwall Courier of Jan. 30 has the following review of affairs on the Isthmus: During the past fortnight nothing of importance has transpired except the opening connection of the railroad. For weeks it has appeared doubtful whether it would be possible to complete this connection before the end of January; but notwithstanding that there have been several obstacles, either of which seemed almost insuperable—notwithstanding that it has rained every day, and almost incessantly during several weeks—the connection was made, and the cars went over the track the whole distance from Aspinwall to Panama, on the 28th of January.

On the arrival of the train near Panama, it was met by a large proportion of the native population, who were anxious to behold the fire-eating steed with his train of carriages. On the approach of the train they seemed stupefied with amazement; but when the engineer opened his steam-whistle, their wonder was changed to fear—and some of the women and children were so entirely bewildered and terrified that they started for the woods, screaming at every jump. The impression upon the entire population, on the appearance of the train at the city, was of the most exciting character, and after the first paroxysm of wonder was over, the people crowded about the train so close as scarcely to leave room for it to move upon the track. The train reached Panama about noon, (having run down from the Summit, the first time, in an hour and a half,) and remained until near 7 o'clock in the evening, giving the whole population of the city an opportunity to see the great wonder they had so long been expecting. About dark the train started from Panama for Aspinwall, and reached the city at midnight.

The next morning, Monday, Jan. 30, the first regular train left Aspinwall for Panama, and on Tuesday, the 30th, the first company of passengers from the United States of Colombia left Aspinwall for Panama, in the cars, to go over the whole transit by steam.

NEW-GRANADA.

The Aspinwall Courier informs us that the St. Thomas steamer brought Gen. POSADA, who left some eight months since, with the troops of the Isthmus. The General comes from the coast where everything is quiet, and where he was stationed on his first arrival there. At the time the Cienegas threatened to take up arms for Melo, Gen. POSADA went there and subdued them, since which time he has been officiating as second in command of the forces of the Atlantic coast division.

The Isthmus troops were superseded on the Atlantic by Carthagenians, and were united with the forces that centred at Bogota. It is said they have been dismissed, and will probably be sent to Carthagena in time for this port.

PERU, BOLIVIA AND CHILI.

The most important news is from Peru. Gen. CASTILLA has overthrown ECHENIQUE, and takes the Government into his own hands. The battle which decided the contest was fought Jan. 5, but a short distance from the gates of Lima. After the battle had fairly commenced, two entire battalions of the Government forces went over to the Revolutionists; the army of the latter was soon afterwards. President ECHENIQUE, when he found that his plan of battle had been foiled by a change in the position of CASTILLA's troops during the night, seems to have shown the white feather. He made but one effort to gain the battle—when this failed, he left the field, and fled with all possible speed to the dwelling of the British Minister, Mr. SULLIVAN. At last accounts, he was supposed to be still there. The populace having manifested a disposition to disregard the sanctity of the Minister's house in their fury against the fallen President, CASTILLA stationed a force to protect it. CASTILLA's army entered Lima about 10 o'clock on the morning of the battle, amid the most enthusiastic welcome of the people. Gen. CASTILLA made a truly triumphant entry of the city about 2 P. M. Lima having been taken, a force was sent to Callao, and the castle and squadron were surrendered after a short parley, a number of the principal citizens having held a meeting on the first receipt of the news from Lima, and resolved to recognize the authority of CASTILLA.

The dates from Bolivia are to the 27th December. AGUEA, who had been pushing successfully towards LA PAZ, had been put down. The President has published those engaged with AGUEA. The President has called an extra session of Congress for the first of February, and announced that he should then resign his office and retire to private life.

All was quiet throughout the provinces of the Argentine Confederation at the latest dates, Dec. 21, and the news from Chili, which is up to Dec. 30, is of no importance.

Police Commissioners.

The Commissioners of Police were in session yesterday, in the Mayor's private office. A large number of policemen were present, in and around the office, anxious to hear the proceedings.

The only case called up was that of JOHN DALTON, First Lieutenant of the First Ward Police, charged by his Captain (HALPIN) with: 1st, Neglect of duty; 2d, Disobedience of orders; 3d, Disrespectful language to a superior officer. The charges were supplied by eight separate specifications. Some of the alleged offences were committed so far back as June, 1854. Lengthy affidavits in support of the charges, made by Capt. HALPIN, Lieut. SHOUGRASS, and Private CONNELLY, were read. Capt. HALPIN, the only witness sworn, was cross-examined at great length, and closely, by Mr. DUSTERD, who appeared for the defendant. The Commissioners adjourned, without concluding the case.

Case of Abduction.

Yesterday morning, a remarkable case of abduction came to light. The wife of HULDREICH HELLBRENNER was induced by a grocer's clerk, named HENRY WISSEN, to leave her husband, taking with her all the household furniture, jewelry, and wearing apparel, valued at $1,300. The necessary affidavits were taken, and Justice DAVISON dispatched Sergeant MARTIN and police officer MOORE to find the missing wife and the property. The officers recovered a portion of the goods at the house of Mr. PICKLE, No. 163 Spring-street, and subsequently found the woman at a lager bier shop in Twenty-ninth-street, near the Eighth-avenue. She was in the company of her lover, and the officers found in their possession $861 in cash, and $400 worth of clothing, all of which was recognized as having been taken from the injured husband at the time of the flight. When the lady was brought to the police office she met her husband and embraced him with a renewed affection. The "fare up" was forthwith arranged between the parties, and they left the Court-room arm in arm as if nothing had happened.

Fatal Explosion in Roxbury, Mass.

From the Boston Courier, Feb. 9.

About 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, a boiler in the kitchen of the house of Mr. SAMUEL A. WAY, corner of Park-street and Gore-avenue, Roxbury, exploded and scalded CATHARINE GLENNON so severely that she lived but a short time. CATHARINE KELLEY and MARGARET BRENNAGAN, the latter a girl aged 10 years, were also in the kitchen at the time, and both were badly scalded, although not dangerously. Mrs. WAY, who was in the room over the kitchen, was thrown with great violence several feet and narrowly escaped. A marble table in the room with Mrs. WAY was broken against the wall, and a door was torn from its hinges in the kitchen and forced through the ceiling close to where Mrs. WAY was thrown. In the kitchen all the doors and windows were blown completely out, and the range completely demolished. The boiler was supplied with water from a cistern in the upper room, the leading pipe from which is supposed to have been frozen up on Tuesday night, thus stopping the supply, and hence the explosion.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—Ptr. 7.

Before Judge Bosh.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY—TOUCHING'S DEFT.

Yesterday, in this Court, Alexander Smith, a blacksmith by trade, but not improbably a white Smith by profession, between being certain Hibernian gentleman, brought before the bar, and the whole will stand accused of having committed an assault and battery on a gentleman, who gave him offending testimony against him in the following strain:

My name is LeRoy. I am a Police officer; in Thirty-third-street is a certain house, a candy store; on Sept. 6, 1854, said woman came to me at the station; said she wanted a policeman; naturally, as a woman summoned me, I went; I met a gentleman name by name; when I locate woman, I go there; then I met defendant; said gentleman was a friend to her house; she said defendant owed money, and she did another little business behind another; that I was intoxicated in her house; he pushed me out; I was intoxicated; I was ill; when I got to her store, I found defendant there; the lowest question I could; he pulled the next from my bosom and caught me by the throat; he dragged a portion of my coat; he then ran off to his shop, where he meet at me with a hammer; he went into that shop again, and came at me with a bar of iron to the amount of 1 cwt; consciousness came near to me, when he would be dead at me with the iron; two officers came to assist me; I am at last secured him, but not till he had got me down, forced his hand into my throat till she stood; the man of my death, and nearly killed me; I was another to assistance; I was in a lonely and near; my back and side were hurt; I have been weakly ever since.

Mr. A. L. Fullerton, counsel for the defendant, then addressed, and for the defendant, for the defendant, that the prisoner was the aggressor. The gentleman admitted that he struck the prisoner, and that he struck him first. It appeared from the testimony that the other had threatened himself, giving rise to a violent temper, and provoking the blow. There also had with him stick. He denied striking one of the officers that he had the assault that they supplied, and that he struck the officer, and that he was the aggressor. The gentleman admitted that he struck the prisoner, and that he was the aggressor. The testimony was, it was severe, that he was the aggressor. The testimony was, that he was the aggressor. The testimony was, that he was the aggressor. The testimony was

ALBANY, Friday, Feb. 9.

The Senate met this morning, went through with a trifle of routine business, and then—like sensible people, and very unlike Senators—adjourned over until 7 o'clock on Monday evening.

In the Assembly, all the regular Orders were laid upon the table, until "motions and resolutions" was reached, then Mr. BLANCHARD moved that when the House adjourn, it adjourn to meet on Monday evening, at 7 o'clock. This was carried, much to the satisfaction of the attendants, on hart.

AFTER THE HARLEM RAILROAD.

Mr. WATERBURY, of Westchester, offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That a Committee be appointed to inquire into the action of the Harlem Railroad Company in charging extra fare on way-passengers.

It is charged that the Harlem Company are in the habit of charging as high as five cents a mile for those way-passengers who cannot or do not procure tickets previous to entering the cars. For instance, between Hunt's Bridge and Brewsterville, a distance of two miles, the fare cannot be more than six cents, or three cents a mile—yet they charge five cents extra, because the passenger had not obtained a ticket before the train starts, so that he pays eleven cents for the two miles. The Company adhere to this rule, even where they have no ticket-office at the stations where the passenger may join the train.

THE FIRST DIVISION.

Mr. COOKE called from the table the following resolution and moved its adoption:

Resolved, That the Commander-in-Chief be requested to direct the Adjutant-General to take such measures as may be necessary to enforce, in the First Military Division, a compliance with section 6, article 1, title 4, of the Militia laws of this State, passed April 17, 1854; and in so doing to cause each transfer of companies as may be necessary to accomplish a uniformity of dress in the several regiments, so far as the same can be done without changing the dress of any company.

The calling up of the resolution was the signal for a commotion, which was only allayed by the explanation of Mr. WATERBURY, who assured members that this was not one of SAM's hantlings—that the old gentleman had not the slightest interest in the proposed resolve. It then passed, as a matter of course. The following is the section of the Militia law which it is proposed to enforce:

Sec. 6. The eight battalion companies in each regiment shall be either artillery, infantry or riflemen, as the Commander-in-Chief shall deem proper to direct.

The resolution, after the explanation, was passed by a unanimous vote.

THE USE OF THE ASSEMBLY CHAMBER.

The State Agricultural Society applied for the use of the Assembly Chamber on Wednesday evening, for the purpose of holding their annual meeting therein. The request was granted.

FREDERICK DOUGLASS WANTS THE SAME.

Mr. O'KEEFE read a letter from "a distinguished colored gentleman, resident in this city," asking the use of the Assembly Chamber, on Friday evening of next week, for FREDERICK DOUGLASS, who desired to deliver a lecture on "The Rights of Man." It was moved to lay the application on the table, which motion was lost, and after some discussion, in which Mr. WATERBURY, of Westchester, and Mr. STEVENS, of Genesee, advocated the granting of the request, the motion made by Mr. O'KEEFE was adopted. Is it not an evidence of the progress of toleration, when three of the most distinguished Democratic members of the House, forgetting past prejudices, unite in offering and urging the passage of a resolution, recognizing a colored citizen as worthy of something more than the plantation and the lash?

THE BILL FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF INTEMPERANCE.

On motion of Mr. MAY, the order of "motions and resolutions" was laid upon the table, and the House brought to the order of "unfinished business," which made the resolutions to refer the "bill for the suppression of intemperance" up for consideration.

Mr. STEVENS, Maine Law, moved the adoption of the first part of the resolution offered yesterday, as follows:

Resolved, That the bill for the suppression of intemperance be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Select Committee which reported the bill and five additional members to be appointed by the Speaker, with power to report complete; and that the Select Committee be instructed to report the bill complete on Monday next.

This motion prevailed, under a call—Ayes 58, Nayes 20. Mr. STEVENS then moved the adoption of the second division of the resolution, as follows:

"That the final vote be taken on the third reading of the bill on Wednesday, the 21st inst., at 12 o'clock, and that said third reading be the special order for that time."

This required a two-third vote, and, the roll being called, it was adopted—Ayes 62, Nayes 20. Mr. LEIGH moved to reconsider the vote on the last motion.

O'KEEFE, anti-Maine Law, moved to lay that motion on the table. This was voted down—Ayes 20, Nayes 61—and then the House refused to reconsider the vote, adopting the resolution to refer and reject complete, by Ayes 64, Noes 61.

Mr. STEVENS, M. L., then moved to lay on the table the regular order of business, and gave notice that he should continue that course until the order of "motions and resolutions" was reached, as he desired to propose the suspension of the 50th rule. The roll was called on the motion made by Mr. STEVENS, and resulted, Ayes 54, Noes 32. "General Orders" was next announced. Mr. MAY, M. L., moved to lay this order on the table, and the motion prevailed without a call of the roll. The order of "presentation of petitions" was announced. The first petition presented was about to be referred, when Mr. O'KEEFE called for its reading. It was read through. Another followed with the same call, and the reading to commence with the call. When the County of Cayuga was called, Mr. WOODIN, Maine Law, moved to lay the order of "presentation of petitions" on the table, for the purpose of getting on towards the coveted "motions and resolutions!" "Here the Temperance front ranks broke, and the opponents of the bill gained their first victory. The motion to suspend was lost, and the order was proceeded with. When the County of Monroe was called, Mr. STEVENS presented a remonstrance against the passage of an act to regulate the sale of patent medicines. Mr. O'KEEFE called for the reading of the remonstrance, which was pending, when Mr. STEVENS moved to dispense with the further reading. The vote was called, Ayes 41, Noes 1; Mr. O'KEEFE raised the point of order, that a quorum had not voted. Well taken, and the vote taken again. Still no quorum, and the vote recalled. Again no quorum, and Mr. O'KEEFE moved a call of the House. Refused, and the vote again called, when the Speaker reminded members that the rule required them to vote whenever within the bar of the House, when the question is stated. Under this ruling the vote came up to Ayes 54, Noes 12—a quorum, and the reading was dispensed with. No further interruption was made to the presentation of petitions, and

MR. LEIGH RISES TO A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

During his temporary absence from his seat, Mr. O'KEEFE had asked and obtained leave of absence for himself (Mr. LEIGH) for three days. O'KEEFE is one of the practical men, and had been assisted to perpetrate this joke upon the leader of the Maine Law men without the trick being discovered. Mr. LEIGH did not put this exactly in the shape I have given it, but took the matter seriously, asserting that he felt it to be his duty as his constituents to stay and take his part in the proceedings of the body to which he had been elected.

Mr. O'KEEFE moved that he himself (should he obtain leave of absence for the remainder of the session) The House refused to grant the leave asked, and then proceeded from the First Division called, and then

Mr. ELSWORTH, who rises to a question of privilege on behalf of the entire New-York delegation, read his article of Sunday last in the Tribune, about the Sunday-liquor-law, the recent speech of one of the New-York Free Trade Congressmen. He read the article through, and made some comments, in which the House appeared to agree, especially when he recounted that "there was no worse character than a New-York Alderman."

AT IT AGAIN.

These little manœuvres being exhausted, the petitions came flooding in again, and on almost every conceivable subject. The bill to regulate the sale of patent medicine appears to have caused a great commotion. From all parts of the country there comes in an avalanche of remonstrances—at least thirty this morning—and I suspect that the tide has only commenced to run this way. They are referred to the Medical Committee having the bill in charge. That Committee is made up of old time practitioners, so that the remonstrances must be very strong if they carry the bill overboard. The bill simply requires that the ingredients of all patent medicines shall be named in the label placed on the box or bottle in which the medicine may be enclosed.

JACK TAR'S CHILDREN.

The Directors of the Asylum for the Destitute Children of Seamen ask that the Legislature will contribute for their use some of the surplus funds gathered from the sailor by the tax of a dollar every time he leaves port, now paid to the support of the Seamen's Retreat, or grant them an appropriation of $10,000. The petition bears the signatures of the lady officers of the Asylum and of the gentlemen advisers, among whom I notice the names of WM. H. ASPINWALL and MOSES H. GRINNELL.

THE HARLEM BRIDGES.

The citizens of New-York and the adjoining villages in the County of Westchester are sending up largely remonstrances against the further continuance of the monopoly heretofore enjoyed by the Harlem Bridge Company.

The citizens of Harlem are petitioning that the Harlem Railroad Company be made to construct a footpath at least six feet wide on the side of the new bridge.

SOMETHING MORE ABOUT THE HARLEM RAILROAD.

The President and Secretary and the seal of the Harlem Railroad Company, for the Directors thereof, represent that in consequence of large losses, incurred principally through funds perpetrated during the past year, they desire to submit to the Stockholders a proposition to reduce the par value of the shares of the old capital stock of the New York and Harlem Railroad Company, from fifty to thirty dollars each, and ask the passage of a bill for that purpose.

THE TEMPERANCE MEN RALLY.

When the next order, "presentation of reports," was reached, the friends of the Temperance bill showed symptoms of being prepared for action. One of the file leaders moved to lay the order on the table. Carried. Ditto the next, and all succeeding down to "motions and resolutions!" again, when, Mr. SEYMOUR offered the following resolve:

Resolved, That No. 89 be suspended so far as relates to the act entitled "An act for the suppression of intemperance," for the purpose of making said act upon the coming in of the report of the Special Committee thereon, the special order from day to day, from and after Tuesday, the 13th inst., to Wednesday, the 21st inst.

Mr. O'KEEFE rose to debate the resolve, and so used up the time until the hour of adjournment, when the Speaker's hammer fell—putting off the resolution, and one of the most brilliant of Mr. O'KEEFE's speeches.

In accordance with the resolutions of reference adopted, the Speaker appointed the following additional members to the Special Committee on the subject of intemperance:

Mr. WIEBER, Maine Law Whig;
Mr. LOWRIE, Maine Law Whig;
Mr. HINES, Maine Law Democrat;
Mr. COMSTOCK, Anti-Maine Law Whig.
Mr. WARNER, Maine Law Democrat.

The following was the original committee:

Mr. STEVENS, Maine Law Whig.
Mr. AITKEN, Anti-Maine Law Democrat.
Mr. LEIGH, Maine Law Independent.
Mr. L. MILLER, Maine Law Whig.
Mr. MAY, Maine Law Whig.
Mr. DERMONT, Anti-Maine Law Whig.
Mr. MASTERS, Maine Law Democrat.
Mr. C. P. JOHNSON, Maine Law Whig.
Mr. SPARING, Anti-Maine Law Democrat.

This Committee are to report the bill complete on Monday night, and then will probably be renewed the Parliamentary tactics resorted to this morning, and which were so ably sustained by the minority. The fact is, the Temperance leaders do not manœuvre well in the open field. They get outflanked and divided before they know in what direction the enemy is marching, and unless they do better in future they are gone, hook and line. Gentlemen of the Assembly, you must perfect your drill, and learn your forces to stand fire. J. B. S.

Dr. Hunter on Bronchitis.

LETTER NO. VI.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: The term BRONCHITIS has hitherto been commonly applied to diseases of the throat, and medical writers have too often confirmed this popular error. In my last letter on LARYNGITIS, it will be remembered, I described the windpipe, at its entrance into the lungs, as dividing into two branches. These branches are the beginning of the "Bronchial Tubes"—one enters the right lung, the other the left—and each subdivides into innumerable smaller tubes, like the branching out of a tree. These tubes are called "Bronchial Tubes," and ramify through the whole internal substance of the lungs, ending in little clusters of cavities, called "Air-Cells." When we speak of disease of the Bronchial Tubes, or Bronchitis, therefore, we speak of a disease of the lungs, and not of the throat, as has been so commonly supposed.

BRONCHITIS is a disease of the lining or mucous membrane of the bronchial tubes. This lining or membrane is very sensitive to every external or foreign influence, and is hence liable to become irritated by sudden changes of weather, by impure air, by the fine particles of matter which fill the atmosphere of workshops, or which float upon the wind in dusty cities—by the hundred irritating causes which meet us in almost every place. This irritation leads to inflammation of the membrane, deranges its healthy action, changes the character of its secretions, and sets up a train of symptoms to which we apply the name "Bronchitis." There are two kinds of Bronchitis—Acute and Chronic.

ACUTE BRONCHITIS,

Is commonly known as a "Cold in the Chest." It commences as a catarrh, or "cold in the head," attended by pain over the forehead, and a sense of stuffing in the nose. The irritation extends rapidly to the throat, causing the tonsils to swell, and the fauces to become inflamed. Gradually the inflammation extends to the larynx and a feeling of roughness is experienced in the windpipe, attended by frequent attempts to clear the throat. Soon a sense of titillation occurs in the same part, causing the patient to cough. Next comes a tightness across the chest, and a stuffed or oppressed breathing—the irritation has reached the lungs, and obstructs the free entrance of the air. After a time the cough ceases to be dry, as it was at first, and a thin, sallish, irritating water is discharged every few minutes. This secretion rapidly increases in quantity, and the cough becomes almost constant. But soon a change takes place in the quality of the matter expectorated. It becomes thicker and less salt to the taste—then whitish in color, and then yellow. Gradually the cough abates, the sense of stiffness ceases, the pulse loses its frequency, the oppression in the chest passes off, and health is soon fully reinstablished. This is the usual course of a mild attack of Bronchitis, commonly called a "Cold in the Chest."

Generally, some Bronchitis subsides entirely at the end of a week or ten days, when the patient returns again to his usual health. But frequently the more acute symptoms, only, subside, the cough and expectoration continuing after the fever has wholly disappeared—constituting what is termed

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS.

In this form there is sometimes slight fever towards evening. The patient does not regain his wonted strength or flesh, but remains a little pale than before the attack. He experiences a shortness of breath on exercising, and has a slight but continued sense of oppression in the chest. The cough and expectoration diminish, or entirely disappear during the Summer; but immediately manifest themselves again on the return of Winter, when the expectoration becomes very copious. Hectic fever often supervenes, with night-sweats, and rapid wasting of the flesh and strength; and the patient may die with all the symptoms of Pulmonary Consumption.

It is very common to meet this disease, in a milder form, in persons who speak of it as a "Winter cough." It comes on each Winter, and as regularly subsides during the Summer; but at every succeeding occurrence it manifests itself in greater severity; and the recovery in the following Summer is not so complete. This form of bronchitis, if neglected, will as surely destroy life (and, treated in the usual manner, it is as incurable) as consumption itself. The mucous membrane, sooner or later, becomes altered in structure, and pours forth a matter which has all the qualities of pus. Hectic fever supervenes, and the disease tends slowly, but surely, to a fatal termination.

Another form of Bronchitis is peculiar to middle life and old age. It is distinguished by the quantity and quality of the matter expectorated. In color and consistence, the expectoration is very much like gum-water, and varies from one to several pints in twenty-four hours. I recently had a gentleman under successful treatment, who assured me that he frequently raised a pint and a half in the course of the morning. Usually there are two fits of coughing in the day—one on awakening from sleep in the morning; the other in the evening. There is considerable difficulty of breathing while the paroxysms of coughing last; but it passes off as soon as the lungs are freed from the viscid secretion. The patient is fatsie; he may, however, live and attend to light duties for several years. But the consumptive gradually assumes a pale, bloodless, the body wasts, the blood becomes thin, and death ensues, apparently from the constant drain kept up by the discharge of from the lungs. Some patients die from exhaustion in five or six months; but I have known others to survive for as many years.

There is still another form of this disease, called Dry Bronchitis, from the fact that in the quantity of matter expectorated, it is the very opposite of the variety we have just considered. The essential character of Dry Bronchitis consists in chronic inflammation, attended by a thickening of the mucous membrane, by which the air tubes are diminished in size, and also in the secretion of a dense, glutinous kind of matter, of a greenish or bluish-white color, by which they are still further obstructed. The smaller bronchial tubes are often entirely closed, and occasionally a tube of very considerable size becomes sealed up by this matter. This affection is so common in this climate that, in some degree, it is probable that two out of every three suffer from it. "In the most favored parts of France," says Laennec, "fully one-half of those arrived at adult age will be found, on careful examination, to present evidence of a thickening of some portion of the mucous membrane of the lungs."

The symptoms of Dry Bronchitis are not marked by severity. It is the most insidious of pulmonary complaints. The subject of it is conscious only of being short breathed, when ascending an elevation, or attempting to run. When a large portion of the lung is involved, a sense of oppression is experienced after meals, and on every slight exertion. By some, this oppression is referred to the opposite side of the chest to that on which the disease is situated, or to a remote part of the same side, or even to the region of the stomach. After a time, difficulty of breathing comes on, and continues for several days—the patient complaining of a tightness in the chest, which is relieved by cough, and the expectoration of a tough, jelly-like substance. The cough by which this matter is raised is a mere rasping effort to clear the throat, and may probably not occur more than once or twice daily, and almost unconsciously to the patients themselves. On inquiring if they have a cough, they will, almost without exception, answer, "No!" yet, during your conversation, they will, perhaps, hack, and raise a little jelly-like mass half a dozen times. At intervals, the cough is more severe, and comes on in paroxysms, when it is too commonly regarded as simply "nervous." If the stomach be at all deranged, it is fashionable to regard it as a mere "stomach cough," or as being caused by "liver disease;" while, in fact, the derangements of the stomach, liver, kidneys, and of the uterine function, which exist, are but so many consequences of this very condition of the lungs. There is something so gratifying in being assured by the kind, attentive and intelligent family physician, that there is "no danger of Consumption;" that "this cough is a mere trifle, and will speedily pass away if only left to itself;" that it is not surprising the flattered patient entirely overlooks the important fact that no careful examination of the lungs has been made, to determine the health or disease of this organ; that this gratifying opinion, therefore, is founded on nothing reliable, and, reduced to its intrinsic merits, is simply tampering with human life.

Most "coughs of long standing," unattended by free expectoration, are caused either by this condition of the bronchial tubes, or by incipient tubercles in the lungs. The "NEGLECTED COLD," which so often proves the herald of Consumption, is but another variety of this disease.

The frequency of this form of Bronchitis—its slow, insidious and treacherous progress—and the disastrous consequences to which it so often leads, should awaken from their lethargy all who are nursing dry coughs of long standing, in the vain hope of growing out of them. However slight and apparently unimportant such coughs may seem, they lead on by sure gradations, to a premature grave.

In addition to these varieties of Bronchitis—all of which, it will be for you to remember, have their seat in the mucous membranes of the air-tubes of the lungs—there are several others, which are less common, and therefore, of less importance. Of these we have a form of plastic inflammation, characterized by a kind of false membrane forming on the inside of the tubes, sometimes only in the larger branches, and again extending through the smallest ramifications. It is, in fact, more commonly seated in the smaller tubes, diminishing their size considerably. Again we have the very opposite to this state—namely, an enlargement or dilatation of the air-tubes. This occurs in several forms. The bronchial tubes, in one lobe, or a whole lung, may be enlarged uniformly; or they may be merely swollen out at the extremity, in a globular form; or there may be alternate contractions and dilatations along the tubes.

In addition to these, we have ulcerations of the mucous membrane of the lungs, resembling (of the same character, and produced by the same causes as) ulcerations in the throat.

TREATMENT.

If you have read carefully what I have said on the seat of Bronchitis, viz., that it is within the lungs, you will readily understand how inadequate for its cure must be any remedy which does not penetrate the lungs as deeply as the disease itself. Applications of nitrate of silver to the throat are utterly useless, since they do not reach the fountain of the evil. Have you not seen the consequences of mistreating a disease. Your physician informs you that your affection is Bronchitis, and straightway you submit to the cruel torture of having caustic applied "every second or third day to your throat." If the unnecessary suffering you thus undergo were the only consequences which sprung from it, it would be of less importance; but the disease within your lungs in all this time gaining a firmer hold—the mucous membrane is becoming thickened and the smaller bronchial tubes closed up. These obstructions go on increasing until sufficient air cannot be drawn through the air-tubes to produce the change in the blood from venous to arterial. It is the object of respiration to change the blood from a dark to a bright red color. This change is produced in the lungs by the air we breathe, and cannot occur unless it is received in sufficient quantity. When considerable obstructions exist in the bronchial tubes, the carbon which constitutes the impurity of the blood is not wholly removed, but a part is retained and sent again through the system—impeding the circulation, irritating the brain and nervous system, and deranging digestion. Under this condition of the blood, tubercles are deposited in the lungs. There is no warning stings of the fearful change which is taking place. Without pain, without cough, without expectoration, the seed of this most insidious and mortal disease is sown, and soon brings forth its fruit in the melancholy changes which mark the progress of consumption. Thus consumption arises as a consequence of neglecting or maltreating bronchitis, by placing relinscreen applications to the throat, or palliatives through the stomach. It is a grand desideratum, in the treatment of all diseases, to get the remedy direct to the organ or part affected. We use washes, injections, blisters, purgatives, and so forth, on this principle. In pulmonary diseases the same rule holds good; but how are we to apply it? We cannot use solids or fluids, for this is an air cavity. No; but by inhalation we can reach, thoroughly and naturally, all diseases situated within the air-tubes and cells of the lungs.

What, then, is Inhalation? The word itself merely means the act of inspiring, or drawing in a breath. In medical parlance, it means a mode of administering medicines by breathing them. Thus we say, "I inhale a medicine," as we would say, "I take a medicine"—the difference being simply, that the one is inhaled or breathed, while the other is swallowed. I am thus explicit in order to show that ALL medicines inhaled into the lungs are not alike, any more than all medicines taken into the stomach; and hence, that the benefits to be derived from inhalations must depend upon the experience and skill of the physician who prescribes them. I should have deemed this explanation unnecessary but for the fact that many who write to me regarding the treatment, and whose communications I am always happy to receive, appear to have got the erroneous idea that "inhalation," instead of a new mode of practice, is some specific remedy or nostrum, alike applicable to the most opposite forms of pulmonary disease. To make it such, is to degrade it to the base level of quackery. It can never be honestly employed without a full knowledge of all symptoms and peculiarities of each case, and the adaptation of the remedies accordingly.

The first object of treatment is to cleanse the air-tubes of the lungs by expectorant inhalations. Having attained this object, we next seek to allay the irritation on which the secretion depends—to soothe and heal the inflamed surface. The manner of administering medicines by inhalation in Bronchitis, is as follows: The inhaler, which is made of glass, and holds about a pint of fluid, is half-filled with cold, warm or hot water, according to the nature of the case. The medicines prescribed for a dose are then added, and the patient directed to inhale gently, but deeply, into the lungs, being careful to expand the chest well, without straining or tension. The fluid, being medicated, thoroughly impregnates the air with its properties. On inhaling through the chest tube, a vacuum is created, to fill which a stream of fluid is rushed down the chest tube, and broken up in the inhaler, throwing the whole into vigorous agitation. Each inhalation is continued for five, ten, or fifteen minutes, as may be necessary, and taken three times a day, before meals, or twice a day, on rising and retiring. In this manner, every effect that can be produced by medicine is obtained in the lungs with a degree of certainty unequaled. By simply varying the medicines put into the fluid, the vapor is rendered "expectorant," "soothing," "stimulating," "alterative" or "a stringent," at pleasure. If faithfully and properly carried out, this treatment will rarely disappoint the patient of a speedy and radical cure.

There is one point more to which I will advert before I close, and that is the unwillingness of those suffering to acknowledge themselves in any danger, until their disease has reached an advanced stage. This has, no doubt, arisen in a great degree, from the presumed hopelessness of such cases. Still it is suicidal—for all who have a frequent desire to "clear the throat," and who become fatigued and "out of breath" on every slight occasion, are on the high road to these changes and symptoms which constitute pulmonary consumption. This disease begins, in a majority of cases, as a "cold," ending in a "sore throat"—gradually it extends down the windpipe, rendering the voice slightly hoarse and indistinct, first observed on reading aloud—and, finally, it involves the "bronchial tubes" and "air cells." The seat of the primary disease is the mucous membrane of the throat, windpipe and bronchial tubes. The expectoration comes from this membrane, and the tubercular matter is deposited on its surface. If, therefore, you would avoid the dangers which attend Consumption in an advanced stage you will not disregard these signs of impending evil; but, by prompt and judicious means, seek to restore the offending organ to its former tone and health. You may think I give undue importance to these affections, from which most persons suffer in some degree; but go to those among your own immediate relatives and friends who are now in the last stage of Consumption, and ask them how their disease began. They will, in almost every instance, tell you of a slight cold, a hacking cough, or a little soreness in the throat, which were treated as scarcely worthy of notice a few months ago; and will add that their cough grew worse—their expectoration increased—that hectic fever set in, and they began to lose flesh. Still, they regard it as only a "slight bronchial affection," and, utterly unconscious of their true state, have journeyed onward to the brink of the grave, now yawning to receive them, as tributes from ignorant or injudicious practice!

I cannot too strongly impress upon the minds of those suffering from catarrhal or bronchial affection, the importance of this connection. If catarrh and sore throat were successfully treated, we should have few cases of Bronchitis. If Bronchitis was generally cured, we should have few cases of Consumption. All are but links in the same chain, and hang upon each other as cause and effect.

In my next communication I shall take up the subject of "Consumption;" and it is probable, from the importance of the disease, that my remarks will be continued through several letters.

I am, &c., ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,
Physician for Diseases of the Lungs.
